HISTORY

Our story began when founder Ken Jones rescued his first seal pup in 1958. For many years Ken ran a rescue centre for seals and oiled birds from his home in St Agnes. His dream was to find a site where he could build a permanent rescue centre to rehabilitate the pups and give the residents a safe home.

He found the most beautiful location set aside the Helford River Estuary and this site became what we know as the Cornish Seal Sanctuary.

We are proud of the legacy Ken left us and put seal rescue at the heart of everything we do.

CONSERVATION

Here at the Cornish Seal Sanctuary we rescue and care for seals and other marine creatures in need of help. By sharing their stories with you we hope that you will join us in safeguarding both them and others who might need help in the future. As part of our work we actively support a number of local conservation initiatives including:

Tracking Seals
By monitoring the behaviour of seals after release back into the wild, we define best practice standards and policies that we share with the international rescue community.

Raising conservation awareness
We are working with the Cornwall Seal Group, British Divers Marine Life Rescue, Cornwall Wildlife Trust's Marine Strandings Network and Marine Conservation Society to promote awareness of threats faced by marine mammals.

The SEA LIFE Trust
We are proud to work with the SEA LIFE Trust who work globally to protect the world's oceans and the amazing marine life that lives within them. The SEA LIFE Trust supports practical local projects, like the Cornish Seal Sanctuary, protecting marine wildlife and their habitats, alongside working on conservation campaigns to effect long-lasting change on a global scale.

We find lots of seal pups like Ray who need our help. If you discover a seal that is in distress or alone call us on 01326 221 361 or contact your nearest RSPCA officer and follow these rules:

- DO keep your distance
- DO tell the appropriate organisation
- DON'T attempt to put the pup in the sea
- DON'T attempt to handle the pup
- DON'T ignore the situation
